Woman Found Dead At Lac La Biche

LAC LA BICHE — Mrs. Jean Mried was found dead in her home and her sons James, 15, and Joseph, 13, seriously ill when police called at 2:30 p.m. Monday.

The mother had returned the evening before from a trip to Edmonton. When the boys, who were in the habit of eating at the home of their grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Mike Fyith, did not arrive for lunch the grandparents made investigation and called police. They found the mother dead and the boys in bed, too ill to call for help. They were removed to an Edmonton hospital where the elder brother is still very ill. The younger boy is making good recovery.

An inquest will be held. It is believed that the mother's death was due to food poisoning.

Funeral service was held Oct. 30 from the Arabian Moslem school and interment was in Lac la Biche.

Buffalo Absorbs 15 Shots, Drops 20 Feet In Front Of U.S. Hunter

Hunting North American buffalo is no picnic. And it's not cheap!

A dozen sportsmen have already experienced safari-type thrills after hunting on the rugged southern plains of the Northwest Territories. One 2,500 pound bull, after being shot 15 times, still managed to charge within 20 feet of a U.S. hunter.

Others have amazed hunters with their ability to withstand the firepower of .30.06 calibre and other high-powered rifles.

The trophies have been supreme. One bull measured 30½ inches across the widest point of the head, only 4½ inches off the record head taken in Wyoming's Yellowstone Park.

The hunt for strays which drift out of Alberta's Wood Buffalo National Park and across the NWT border began Sept. 15 and ends Nov. 30.

Only 30 licences have been issued, each good for one buffalo, with the hunters leaving in groups each week from Fort Smith, NWT, 150 miles north of here.

Veteran outfitter Claude Brewster of Banff, describes buffalo hunting as similar to hunting for moose but 'a lot more dangerous." The reward is the trophy and Brewster says he expects a record before the season ends.

The hunters pay dearly for their stab at big game glory. Special licenses cost up to $200, Brewster's fee is $500 and Fort Smith the jumping-off point — is inaccessible except by air. A roundtrip from Edmonton costs at least $76.

The licenses, issued by the federal government, cost Canadians $50 and Americans $200. They are the first ever issued. Buffalo hunting — except by treaty Indians and Eskimos — was banned in Canada in 1893 when the herd twindled to about 500.

Now more than 18,000 of the shaggy, horned beasts roam Wood Buffalo Park and bordering areas almost free of natural enemies.

Alberta Union President Sees Bright Future For Movement

Thirty-five thousand workers were represented by a total of 280 delegates attending the Alberta Federation of Labor's annual convention in Edmonton last week. F. C. Bodie of Ca' gary, provincial president, said the labor movement has risen and lived through adversity.

"You might even term it persecution. We can hold our heads as high as any other organization in the province."

"There are many today who would like to split us apart and place us in a minor role from the major role we are playing today."

Labor had been blamed for many faults for which it was not responsible but "This is not new to us. We have withstood attacks before and we can still do it today."

The labor movement, Mr. Bodie said, had sometimes been termed a selfish organization, worrying only about its own welfare.

"Let me point out that our organization has helped adopt legislation in the province that has not only benefited labor but all the people in Alberta."

Labor injustices to be corrected in Canada, he said, are:

Establishment of unions by companies which "We are not prepared to recognize;"

Legal technicalities used by employers to keep out unions who want to organize or have already organized, and,

Discriminatory policies by companies against employees who join a union or endeavour to form a union.

"If we are going to speak adequately for all the working class in the province," he added, "We should get all legitimate unions to join our federation."

Commercial helicopter operations in the US will total about 326,000 flight hours in 1958, compared with 146,500 in 1956, a 122 per cent increase.

DELEGATE ELECTED

A Ponoka man, Rees Jones, has been elected by acclamation to the position of Alberta Wheat Pool delegate for sub-district 410. He succeeds Fred Auten, of Ponoka, who did not contest the by-election.

Department of agriculture and Alberta Wheat Pool officials have expressed some concern as to the condition of 1958 seedings of forage crops. The dry weather has resulted in young seedlings that lack the growth and vigor usually required for satisfactory wintering.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR IN BUYING TOWELS

Are you confused by the profusion of colors and kinds of towels? Here are some points to consider.

B. McCutcheon

1. A brand name does not necessarily imply quality. Manufacturers make different grades and qualities.

Aren't you glad that the fad for metallic threads is dying out? It certainly didn't contribute comfort or drying qualities to towels. Jacquard borders, too, are less absorbent than the body of the towel.

2. The number and length of pile loops determines the absorbency. Double loops which are often found in cheaper towels are very absorbent but not as durable. Loops should not be less than one eighth inch nor should they be long enough to catch and snag. Ideally the loops should be quite close together. They should be soft and not too tightly twisted.

3. The tightness of the underlying weave is important. Hold the towel up to the light. If the light shows through in tiny regular pin points the weave is uniform and good upon examination.

4. The selvedge should show that all the filling yarns continue into the selvedge and loop around the edge making a firm edge. A machine stitched edge indicates that double width towels have been cut in half.

5. Hems should be straight with a good turn under. The stitching should be short and even showing back stitching at the ends. Do not iron bath towels. It only flattens the loops and interferes with the absorption of moisture. Shrinkage can be expected up to the fifth or sixth laundering and may be as much as fourteen percent. Heavy cord borders often shrink more than the towel giving a puckered appearance.

SPICY NUT-CRUMB APPLE PIE

Pastry for one crust pie:
5-6 apples, sliced
½ cup sugar
1/3 cup all purpose flour
½ cup brown sugar
½ tsp. cinnamon
¼ cup butter
Chopped nuts

Line a nine-inch pie plate with pastry. Arrange sliced apples in shell. Sprinkle sugar over apples. Combine flour, brown sugar and cinnamon, cut in shortening until mixture is crumby. Add chopped nuts. Sprinkle evenly over apples. Bake in hot oven (425°) for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 375°F. and bake 30 minutes longer.

What about the cheese? Try cutting it in triangles and arranging it on top about 5 minutes before it is done.

Three out of five Canadians now have natural gas services available.

Court Decision Means Larger Dividends

Interprovincial Pipe Line Company today declared a quarterly dividend of 55 cents per share payable December 1, 1959 to shareholders of record on November 6, 1959. This represents an increase of 5 cents per share over the previous quarterly payment and brings to $2.00 the total regular payments during the year.

The Company also declared a "special" dividend of 25 cents per payable December 1, 1959 to shareholders of record on November 6, 1959.

In commenting on the Board's action T. S. Johnston, president, stated "Earnings for 1959 have made possible this increase in the quarterly payment. The "special" dividend is being paid as a result of the favorable decision handed lown by the Supreme Court of Canada in the Company's long standing tax suit."

Irene Sachko Awarded Scholarship By Home And School Association

HYLO — Mrs. O. Meardi was elected president of the Home and School Association meeting held Oct. 23. Mrs. E. Keehn was re-elected vice - president; Mrs. J. Meardi secretary, and William Sachko re-elected treasurer.

Richard Meardi was named fund-raising convener; Mrs. S. Lozinski, program planning convener and Mrs. N. Zalewsky, news convener.

The library committee consists of Mrs. O. Meardi, William Sachko and Mrs. S. Lozinski; lunch committee for the 1959-60 terms is Mrs. C. Meardi and Mrs. E. Keehn.

It was reported that a special request was sent to all 1959-60 executives to please forward by Oct. 31 the names of the president, secretary, treasurer and news convener. Administrative changes in the provincial office make this a priority request.

It was decided that the new executive will call a special meeting regarding the skating rink. The group was advised that there would be a grant from the divisional board for the construction of the rink.

A grant for the library books was also announced and there would be assistance in procuring a radio for the school.

It was announced that Mrs. B. McCutcheon, home economist, would hold a meeting Oct. 27 and films would be shown explaining all about 4-H work in Alberta.

Mrs. C. McEachern, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lozinski and Mrs. M. Grandish volunteered to be auditors this year.

Members are asked to note that the Hylo HSA meetings will be held the third Friday of each month from now on.

The annual scholarship of $15 was awarded this year to Irene Sachko who obtained the highest standing in grade 9. William Sachko, principal, informed the society that among 75 students who wrote grade 9 examinations in this division, Irene stood in fourth place. It may be noted here that there was not a failure among the Hylo grade 9 students in 1959, a commendable record.

Mr. Sachko expressed the hope that all the students would continue through senior high and on to university, for they have the opportunity. He emphasized that the parents can assist a great deal in motivating the students, for it not only takes intelligence on the part of the students but hard work and perseverance as well, also encouragement by the parents in the students studying, giving them every opportunity to do so and seeing that they do it.

With the parents' full co-operation he plans to do his utmost with his students every year. His pleasure in the winner of the scholarship was increased by the fact that Irene is his sister.

In her address, Irene Sachko thanked the HSA for making this scholarship possible. She expressed her thanks to her former teachers for their guidance through the years, and especially to Mr. Sachko for the guidance and advice he gave her in grade 9. She also said that the encouragement of her parents helped a great deal when she was disheartened. Also the keen competitions of the students made her work all the harder.

She assured the Home and School that she certainly would use the scholarship to the best advantage possible in forwarding her education.

Then followed the showing of films, one being the children's concert which was produced by the co-operation of the Separate School board at Ottawa. The explanation of the different musical instruments, as well as the music, was enjoyed by everyone. Another film, "Sailors of the Queen" was shown.

OUR DRINKING HABITS

Social Drinking Driver A Menace

By Howard Whitman

Nationally prominent writer on human affairs.

PART 10

It's high time at least three points are cleared up about the bottle and the throttle:

1. The social drinker is a worse menace on the road than the roaring drunk.
2. Coffee does not offset the effects of alcohol.
3. Chemical tests for drunken driving can be passed by many drunken drivers.

Howard Whitman

Let's take these one at a time.

The roaring drunk knows he's drunk, or at least everyone else does. To be sure, he's a potential killer when he gets behind the wheel, but the fact is that he doesn't get behind the wheel nearly as frequently as the driver who's had "a few" and is sure he's cold sober.

"The real highway delinquent appears to be the so-called social drinker," states a report of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies. "The driver who has had just enough alcohol in his system to release his inhibitions, who has reached the state of apparent stimulation, or has a false sense of well-being, is the one who forms a significant link in the casual chain of many traffic accidents.

"Since his moral code is temporarily relaxed, the driver with 'only a few' tends to abandon normal precautions. He oftens submits to an urge to use a heavy foot on the accelerator, to pass when other cars are approaching, to take over the right-of-way or create other tight squeezes as if he owned the road.

"Unfortunately, this 'superman complex' is acquired by the drinking driver at a time when his physical and mental qualifications for driving have been seriously impaired."

There's a catch here, almost a trap. People think the great danger in driving after drinks is impairment of the sheer physical ability to handle a car. It's a danger, all right.

But more and more evidence points to a greater danger: the cockiness, the bravado, the puffed up confidence and the clouded judgment of the driver who's been drinking. This is the grim stuff of which drinking accidents are made. It is the rattle of death in, "I drive better when I'm drunk."

CAN'T JUDGE SELF

Dr. Herman Heise, of Milwaukee chairman of an American Medical driver intoxication, asserts, "Many people firmly believe that if they don't run into a hydrant as soon as they drive with a few drinks under their belt, and have actually negotiated long trips in spite of a load of alcohol, then alcohol does not affect their driving.

The loophole in such reasoning is that no man can judge the effects of alcohol on himself when all his judgments are somewhat addled by alcohol."

Point 2 which needs clearing up is the coffee story. Some people have the idea that coffee "neutralizes" alcohol. Or that it somehow speeds alcohol out of the system. It does neither.

The virtues of coffee for one who's been drinking are (1) it may settle his stomach if he's about to get sick, (2) it may keep him awake if he's about to fall asleep, (3) he will be less drunk to the extent that he's drinking coffee instead of booze.

Once alcohol gets into the body, the phenomenon which we call "sobering up" is the process of eliminating it. Some comes out in the urine, some in the breath, and some through the skin; but these routes accommodate only about one-tenth of the alcohol. The rest has to be burned up, or oxidized, in the body. The liver handles most of it; the brain handles some.

COFFEE WON'T HURRY IT

It takes time. If five drinks are downed in one hour, and no more is consumed it will be at least 12 hours before the brain has burned up its alcohol. And drinking coffee won't hasten the process.

At the Harvard School of Public Health an individual was given the alcohol equivalent of eight highballs in four hours. He had reached the drunk level (.15% alcohol in the blood) in two hours and he stayed above that level for nine hours. He still had a blood alcohol level of .09% (about half drunk) 14 hours afterward.

The brain, as far as we know, holds its alcohol to the last. It is eliminated from the brain even slower than from the blood.

Airplane pilots are, of course, forbidden to drink before taking a plane up. But they are forbidden to drink for a full 18 hours before. See why ?

Point 3 to be set straight is the drunk test.

USED IN MANY STATES

Forty-six states use chemical tests to determine whether a driver is "under the influence" of liquor. The customary scale is:

SAFE — .05% of alcohol in the blood (two ounces of whiskey or two bottles of beer).

QUESTIONABLE — up to .15% of alcohol in the blood (six ounces of whiskey or six bottles of beer).

ILLEGAL—over .15% of alcohol in the blood.

That's what the law says. What does science say ?

Tests were conducted at the Medical School of the University of Washington, in Seattle, with electrically controlled driving apparatus and drivers scientifically primed with martinis, manhattans or straight whiskey.

Their ability to drive showed a measurable sag when the blood alcohol reached only .03% (one to two drinks). When the blood alcohol reached .10% (four drinks) ability to drive fell to 85% of normal. When it finally reached the legal limit of .15% alcohol in the blood, driving ability fell to 70%.

WHAT THEY SAY ?

Drs. T. A. Loomis and T. C. West concluded: "The results of the present study indicate that blood alcohol levels well below .15% induce measurable objective impairment of the functions tested in the simulated driving test. All the subjects showed some impairment of function at blood alcohol concentrations of .05%. Current law is thus too lenient, since impairment of function is present before the legal limit of blood alcohol concentration is reached.

"If the intention of such law is to enable legal action to be taken when impairment of function is present, then .05% alcohol in the blood (now regarded legally as "safe") should be considered as the base level at which a person is under the influence of alcohol for the purpose of driving an automobile."

If it takes six drinks to reach the present legal limit (and some laboratory tests suggest it takes eight to 10, all imbibed within one hour) then it's obvious that many an inebriated individual could get under the legal wire of a drunk test. Haven't you seen someone bombed on less than six?

CANADIAN EXPERIMENTS

Experiments at the University of Toronto, Canada, suggest that as few as four drinks in an hour will triple the driver's chances of an accident, while eight drinks raise the accident hazard ten-fold. Even two drinks, says the National Safety Council, may reduce the effectiveness of eyesight as much as wearing dark glasses at night.

New York Traffic Commissioner T. T. Wiley has challenged our electronics engineers to develop the "only real drunk test." He wants a device that would automatically immobolize a car if the driver has been drinking. What would it be ?

Perhaps an alcohol-sensitive plate that would catch the driver's breath and disconnect the starter or the scent of booze.

P.S. — Last year's drinking driver was involved in 30% of all fatal traffic accidents. In these accidents 11,550 men, women and children died.

WHICH OF THESE two men would be the greatest menace on the highway, the one who is thoroughly drunk or the fellow who's just "had a few"? Surprisingly enough, it's the latter, says the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies.

Pair Married In Lions' Cage

CUNEO, Italy (UPI) — Not only the groom was nervous during the marriage of Dino Fiorello, 32, and Vittorina Gatti, 27.

The bride, the groom, the priest and the three witnesses all were anxious to get the wedding completed.

The choir wasn't though. They were outside the lions cage.

Fiorello and Miss Gatti were married inside the lions' cage—complete with half a dozen of the beasts — at the Medrano Circus here.

The publicity-stunt wedding took only a few nerve-wracking minutes.

Charge Youth, 18 With Bold Robbery South Side Bank

Eighteen-year-old Robert Frederick Wolokoff was arrested and charged with armed robbery following a daring daylight robbery of the south side branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Police said a bandit walked in at noon, waved customers back with a rifle and pushed a paper bag at teller Ellen Desjardins. "fill this bag and do it in a hurry," he told her. She did—with about $2,745 cash.

The bandit walked out then sprinted around a corner.

A house-by-house search by police resulted in the finding of Wolokoff in a shed several blocks from the bank. They said cash and a .22 calibre rifle, not loaded, were found.

Three customers, four or five women employees and accountant Bernard J. Giesbrecht were in the bank when the bandit walked in at noon.

The youth said he had been out of work for several months and hadn't eaten for 1½ days. The court was told he has been in a foster home since he was seven years old.

He was found when Mrs. Annie Turnbull, 88, of 10544 81 Ave. looked in a woodshed in her backyard as police searched the area.

O.K. If Nude Girls Pose For Convict In Swedish Jails

KARLSTAD, Sweden (UPI) — City prison warden Anders Sandberg said here he failed to see anything "remarkable" about the case of an inmate who photographed nude models in his cell and allegedly got one of them pregnant.

Police broke up the "modelling school" after a teenaged girl complained she received an indecent letter from a man at a No. 3 Karlberg St., which happens to be city prison.

The convict, whose name was withheld, advertised in newspapers as "Tony Caer," a photographer who would break girls into the modelling business.

Girls between the ages of 16 and 22 flocked to the convict's cell and during visiting hours posed for hundreds of pictures, most of them nude or semi-nude, some of them pornographic, police said.

None of this upset the warden too much.

"According to law," Sandberg explained, "convicts are entitled to receive visitors without being watched more often than once every hour.

"The prison authorities also encourage convicts to maintain contacts with the outer world to facilitate their return to freedom.

"I wouldn't call the pictures very pornographic, and . . . after all, it is not unusual in this country that convicts father children during visiting hours," he said.

RCMP Constable Dies In Crash

ELLERSLIE — Reinhold Yethon, 28-year-old RCMP constable, was killed here when his car struck the rear of a slow-moving grain truck near this hamlet 10 miles south of Edmonton. Yethon, a member of the force for eight years, was stationed at nearby Wetaskiwin.

Fluoridation "Greatest Health" Measure To Date

SASKATOON — "Fluoridation of drinking water is one of the greatest health measures since the turn of the century," Dr. M. M. Cohen of Boston said here.

Dr. Cohen is a member of the faculty of the school of dental medicine of Tufts University and a consultant with the United States public health service on problems of dentistry for children.

"In order to derive the most benefit from fluoridation, the mother must drink it for the whole period of her pregnancy, and the child must drink it at least to the age of eight," he said in an interview.

"If the use of fluoridated water begins later than this it will be ineffective in preventing dental caries."

Surveys had shown that only one child in a hundred could be regarded as immune to caries. The other 99 would lose an average of two teeth a year, until at age 15 most or all of the teeth would be lost, unless the child received dental care.

"Caries are not a cavity," he said, but a disease, and it is a disease to which almost everyone is subject."
